The term traditional, complementary and alternative medicine is a most reasonable term to clarify such traditional treatments all around. Traditional and alternative medicine mainly covers all aspects of modern and standardized clinical research in the field of chemistry, proteomics, molecular mechanism, genomics, Pharmacology, safety, quality control, metabolomics, clinical studies of traditional Chinese, Unani, Arabic and Ayurvedic medicine. These medicines are leading and foremost internationally reviewed journal reflecting the current formidable scientific clinical practices which show progress of the global traditional, folk, and ethnologic medicine. Traditional medicine and complementary and alternative medicine have, in the past 10 years, claimed an increasing share of the public's awareness and the agenda of medical researchers. Public health research must consider social, cultural, political, and economic contexts to maximize the contribution of traditional and alternative medicine to health care systems globally.
